

Zetaman: Portland's real life superhero

Originally posted: <http://www.koinlocal6.com/content/news/webextras/story/Zetaman-Portlands-real-life-superhero/Gj-MlzP0p02-I7lq13-bJw.csp>

Zetaman.TV

Reported by: Tim Gordon

Last Update: 3/11 10:52 pm

PORTLAND- The real life superhero movement is sweeping the country. And Portland has one of its leaders, helping others in his costumed crusade.

Zetaman leaves the hard core crime fighting to the professionals, but is trained in first aid and CPR. He dresses up to help the homeless, and support good causes like the March of Dimes. He also might change your flat tire if he finds you stuck on the side of the road.

Just don't be alarmed by the bright blue costume. It's all about being a community activist in costume – a creative outlet that helps others.

Zetaman is part of a group of Americans that refer to themselves as Real Life Superheroes. Comic book superheroes have traditionally exemplified the values of trustworthiness, bravery, selflessness, and passion. These hallmarks of fictional iconic characters are the same that the Real Life Superheroes strive to embody.

The Real Life Superheroes is a grassroots movement that works to make the world a better place. They are using the iconicism of comic book superheroes to try to make a difference, inspire others, spread a positive message, and call attention to issues in our communities.

They believe there is a hero in everyone and they want to bring it out to help make this world a little more super.

The Real Life Superheroes movement is (sort of) the basis for a new full-length featured movie coming out in April. A preview is below.